November 2017 Newsletter
Vol. 191

Hi, Gentle Reader!

Can someone tell me how, exactly, we're in November? Weren't we just exchanging Valentines? I don't know about you, but it seems this year put on the afterburners and sped by somewhere around April. Maybe since I've been travelling almost nonstop since the summer—which makes for an interesting writing schedule, I assure you.

I don't know if you know this, but most of us writers work better when we're left to our own devices. For the first time in a while, I have a long stretch of time that doesn't require me to board a plane, and I am so giddy. I even unpacked my suitcase all the way. I'm sinking back into my writing habit, finding those perfect hours to write, interrupted only by the mewling of wee cats, who desperately want to play, or keep chittering at me to join them at the window to watch the birds. If I had a super power, I'd wish for telekinesis so I could move their catnip-scented cork balls around the floor, and dangle fishing poles with feathers attached, without getting up. Even with their antics, these are happy days. I get to make a cup of tea, open my laptop, and just write. Glorious.

Catherine and I are almost done with the first draft of Nicholas #5. We'll polish that up and get it into your hot little hands on April 10, 2018. We're nailing down the final cover, and we'll show that to you soon. I've seen the mockups, and it is GORGEOUS. Make sure you follow me on the socials and my blog so you don't miss it! We did rename the book, and I can share the new title with you, at least. It's now called THE SIXTH DAY!

As soon as I turn this one in, I will be returning to the secret project I drafted early this year. More news on that to come soon, I promise.

I have a few things (i.e. a ton of great books) and a yummy recipe to tell you about, so let's get started!

LIE TO ME is now in Target!

LIE TO ME is now in Target!

If you have a big red bullseye near your house, stop by and pick up a copy of LIE TO ME (and maybe one for your book club friend, too). Your significant other will thank you for coming home with something from Target everyone can enjoy!

What I'm Reading

I'm on a witch kick, thanks to the Halloween season.

PRACTICAL MAGIC is one of my favorites, and I've enjoyed stepping back into Alice's world, on audio, this time. I've been finding excuses to drive places so I can listen. Victoria Schwab is brilliant and never disappoints. Menna van Praag is new to me, but I can tell a binge-read of her backlist is about to begin. And what better than a celebration of magical women writers to fill out the month? Blessed be!

November's Recipe: Golden Milk

Golden Milk

Who likes a nice, warm beverage at the end of a long, cold day? ☺

This drink is filled with cinnamon and warming spices, and has the added benefit of being oh-so healthy. Golden Milk gets its signature color from turmeric, which has been used for centuries to reduce inflammation and boost the immune system. When you're feeling a bit under the weather, Golden Milk might just be what you need. And for us ladies of a certain age, turmeric is a godsend. The best thing for evening out those grumpy moods...

This particular recipe was gifted to me by Amanda Dorward at Book Passage, and I swear by it.

Oooh, take me to the Golden Milk.

That's it from me!

As we enter this season of thanksgiving, I want to thank you, my dear readers, for your support through this incredibly crazy year. We're all in this life together, and I send many blessings to you and yours. I hope you have a wonderful month ahead, and I'll see you in December!

XO,

Stay up on all of my book bargains and new books!

Let's be friends. I don't bite!
